

Statement on Falsely Equating Gender-Affirming Health Care and Female Genital Mutilation/Cutting

The U.S. FGM/C Network (“The Network”) and the Tahirih Justice Center are concerned about legislation to ban gender-affirming health care, including puberty blockers and hormone replacement therapy for Trans youth in particular.

Our main priority is to protect against FGM/C and other forms of gender-based violence. We are disheartened to see legislation conflating gender-affirming care with FGM/C in efforts to discriminate against vulnerable youth.

The World Health Organization defines FGM/C as all procedures that involve partial or total removal of the external female genitalia, or other injury to the female genital organs for non-medical reasons. The practice has no health benefits and can lead to a range of serious, negative physical and mental health outcomes.

Gender-affirming care for Trans youth and FGM/C are not the same. We firmly believe that these two very important issues should not be linked through legislation that seeks to criminalize gender-affirming care or associated in any other context.

In addition, we condemn any legislation that frames FGM/C in an attempt to stigmatize, marginalize or scapegoat communities. Such framing goes against The Network’s values and the values of the Tahirih Justice Center. We believe in approaching ending FGM/C and differing opinions with understanding, empathy, and sensitivity to prevent discrimination, targeting, blame, and shaming.

We call on all states and the federal government to refrain from falsely equating gender-affirming care and FGM/C and to focus instead on the prevention of FGM/C and all forms of gender-based violence and the promotion and protection of human rights for all.
